John Locke is unusual in the wealth of source material which he left for later scholars. In his will, he stipulated that all his manuscript papers and half of his library were to go to his cousin Peter King. These remained in the family and the papers were purchased by the Bodleian Library from the last owner, the Earl of Lovelace, in 1947.

An Essay Concerning Human Understanding - Wikipedia

In his Essay, Locke explains the gradual unfolding of this conscious mind. Arguing against both the Augustinian view of man as originally sinful and the Cartesian position, which holds that man innately knows basic logical propositions, Locke posits an 'empty mind', a tabula rasa , which is shaped by experience; sensations and reflections being the two sources of all of our ideas .
